HyperMotion Technology improves goalkeepers who react instantaneously to a player's movements, while also improving the match pace and overall feel of gameplay. With the introduction of the new control scheme and gameplay, FIFA 22 also improves the speed and accuracy of free kicks with the control stick. Additionally, the Revamped Ball Physics System (RBPS) will make free kicks fly more accurately, and players will feel more connected to the ball. RBPS uses the same physics as found in today's best games (and in real life), but makes certain aspects easier to understand. "FIFA 22 brings players closer to the action than ever before, which is thanks to our many enhancements in physics and control," said Andreas Seyfried, Chief Executive Officer of Electronic Arts. "Players will be able to feel the crack of the ball like never before, while the RBPS and HyperMotion Technology add a new dimension to what they can do on the pitch." "For FIFA fans and serious soccer gamers, we understand the importance of gameplay authenticity – and we are proud to have the world's leading motion capture studio working with us on FIFA 22," said Anwar Allaman, Chairman of EALA. "This is a significant milestone for the FIFA team as we prepare to launch a new FIFA with the kind of authentic gameplay that soccer fans have come to expect." "Applying our collective years of experience working on sports games, we are confident that the combination of RBPS and HyperMotion technology will deliver FIFA 22 gameplay that is even more realistic than that of FIFA 19," said Pablo Mauro, Executive Producer for FIFA 22. The RBPS system is based on the physics seen in the best-selling FIFA 16 game, FIFA 17 and FIFA 18. It is set to combine accurate ball physics with mechanical gameplay and very close player interaction. FIFA 22 will be available on Xbox One, PlayStation 4 and PC on September 27th. Pre-orders are now available on Xbox and PS4 stores. RBPS – Revised Ball Physics System Due to the complexity of real-world ball physics, the goal of FIFA 22 RBPS is to make the player's overall interactions with the ball more intuitive, natural and realistic. To make the new RBPS function properly, we felt that many elements that could have an impact on gameplay's action physics needed to be

FIFA (Fédération Internationale de Football Association) is the governing body of association football and is a member of the Confederation of North, Central American and Caribbean Association Football (CONCACAF). FIFA is responsible for the organization and promotion of the sport, including certification of the rules and disciplinary procedures, training of referees, selection and accreditation of competitions and determining and sanctioning of issues to do with cheating and corruption. The game of association football, or football, is widely played around the world with a total of over 3 million registered players in 1,070 member countries. Every September, the world's top football stars gather in England for the FIFA Ballon d'Or awards, which have been running since 1956 and attract a global audience of over 100 million. Football (or soccer as it is colloquially known in the US and Canada) is one of the oldest sports in existence, with the history of the sport dating back to over five hundred years ago. Playing soccer in public is illegal in Syria, Iran, China, North Korea, Russia and Azerbaijan, while the sport is widely banned in the United States (though FIFA's website lists it as an "intramural" sport at universities), much of Europe, numerous other countries, and in the FIFA World Cup. Before FIFA The first known written reference to the sport of football was "The Game of the Ancient Greeks" from circa 400 BC. A ball is either kicked or thrown by either an individual or a team of two to eight players. An early form of goalkeeping appears to have existed in this game and the first game of organized football is believed to have taken place in 1863. In 1878, the first football association was founded and football as we know it today was born. The modern Football Association was formed in England in 1863, the first known national association was the Football Association of Wales, founded in 1876, while the Football Association of Ireland was formed in 1880, the world governing body is the FIFA, founded in 1904.
